

THINKING DIFFERENTLY ABOUT DIVERSITY

at Westonbirt, the National Arboretum

FREE creative arts workshops for neurodivergent people and their families/carers

As part of a new project exploring the connections between biodiversity and neurodiversity, we are inviting neurodivergent people with additional support needs (along with their carers and families) to join us for a FREE creative arts workshop at Westonbirt, the National Arboretum.

The same workshop will be run twice on Monday 13th February at Westonbirt, the National Arboretum:
Session 1 - 10.30-12.30 / Session 2 - 1.30-3.30

Please note the sessions have a limited capacity and will be operated on a first come first serve basis.

To book please email info@artspacecinderford.org

All participants (and up to two family members/carers) will receive free entry to Westonbirt, the National Arboretum to attend the workshop, and are welcome to enjoy the site throughout the day.
